The term "vicinity" is used in the Licensing Act 2003, in particular with reference to those "interested parties" who may lodge objections to review applications and who may make representations concerning existing premises licences. The Act defines "interested parties" as being " a person living in the vicinity, a body representing persons living in the vicinity, a person involved in a business in the vicinity or a body representing those persons". However, the Act does not define the term "vicinity"

The Licensing Authority has decided that in order to assist applicants and residents it would be helpful to provide guidance as to how it will approach the meaning of the term "vicinity". The Licensing Authority will normally treat the term "vicinity" as meaning within a 100 metre radius of the premises in question. However it is open to an applicant to argue that in particular instances, an objection from an "interested party" within this radius is not relevant. For example, where a major route lies between the resident and the premises and noise from the premises is highly unlikely to affect the resident. It is also open to an "interested party" located outside of this radius to argue that a representation is valid, for example where the resident lives on the route from the premises to bus stops, car parks etc.

Please detail the distance between yourself and the premises applying for the licence	APPRX 100M.
If the distance is greater than 100m, why do you believe that you meet the criteria of an interested party	SOUND OF ENTERTAINMENT CAN BE HEARD THREE MILES AWAY IN BROMFIELD (IN THE LIXNEY) SINGLE GLAZED WINDOWS DO NOT SOUND PROOF.
